Part 2 Questions 7–13

The people below all talk about how they travel to school. Read the texts and then answer the questions. For each question, choose the correct person, A, B or C.

A — Isla	My school is two kilometres from my house, so I walk there with my little sister. She's only six, so it takes us about twenty-five minutes — much longer than my friends take. When it rains hard, my mum says it's too far for my sister, and we go on the bus instead. I like the walk because we talk about everything on the way.
B — Omar	I go to school by bus and it takes half an hour. I always listen to music and podcasts on the bus, so I don't mind it at all. My friend Zac gets on at the same stop, but he likes talking in the morning and I don't, so we usually sit in different seats! The bus is sometimes early, so I get to school ten minutes before the doors open, and I read in the library. I'd rather cycle, but my mum says the road is too dangerous.
C — Tomas	I live in the next village, so my journey is much longer than my friends'. I cycle about six kilometres every morning, and in the winter I leave home when it is still dark. My favourite part is the last kilometre: the road goes past a field with horses in it, and I say hello to them every day. I never take the bus — cycling is much faster and it's free.

Part 3 Questions 14–18

Read the article about chocolate and choose the correct answer A, B or C.

Where does chocolate come from?

Chocolate starts life on a tree. Cocoa trees grow in hot, wet countries near the equator, and they need a lot of rain and shade. Farmers in West Africa, South America and Asia look after them.

The fruit of the cocoa tree is called a pod. It is yellow or orange, about twenty centimetres long, and it holds between thirty and fifty seeds. The pods grow high up in the trees, so the farmers cut them down by hand: a machine would hurt the tree.

Inside each pod the seeds are white and soft. They taste nothing like chocolate. The farmers put the seeds in the sun for a week until they are dry and brown, and then they put them into big bags. These bags travel on ships to factories in other countries.

In the factory the seeds are cooked and then crushed into a thick brown liquid. Sugar and milk are added, and this is the chocolate we buy in the shops.

Chocolate is delicious, but it is not a healthy food for every day. A small piece is fine — a whole bar is not. Many people also forget that the farmers who grow the seeds often earn very little money for the work they do.

14. What is the article mainly about?

- A how and where chocolate is made
- B why cakes and sweets are bad for teeth
- C what farmers in West Africa eat

15. Where do cocoa trees grow best?

- A in hot countries with a lot of rain
- B in cold countries with a lot of snow
- C in dry countries with a lot of sun

16. Why do farmers cut the pods down by hand?

- A The pods are too small for a machine.
- B A machine would damage the trees.
- C The machines are too expensive.

17. What happens to the seeds before they leave the country?

- A They are dried in the sun.
- B They are made into chocolate.
- C They are put into small boxes.

18. What does the writer say about eating chocolate?

- A You should eat it with milk.
- B You must not eat it at the weekend.
- C A small piece is all right, but not a lot.
